

Graduate Study Program – Economics

By completing the study program the student will have competences in :
Master of Economics (graduate study)
By completing the graduate study program the student will be able to:
Understanding and applying knowledge	1	Critically evaluate new and / or innovative theories, models and concepts in the field of economics, widened compared to the undergraduate level
	2	Assess the acquired theoretical and applied knowledge in the field of microeconomics and / or macroeconomics
	3	Assess the theoretical and applied knowledge acquired in the area of development economics, economic integration or international economics
Problem solving	4	Interpret and solve microeconomic and / or macroeconomic problems
	5	Apply advanced statistical, quantitative and qualitative methods and decision-making tools
	6	Create systematic solutions to economic development by applying the acquired knowledge in certain areas
Teamwork and communication	7	Use argumentative communication in written and verbal form on relevant economic issues
	8	Effectively work in a team
Ethical perspective	9	Take on personal and team responsibility for successfully addressing economic development issues by applying ethical and social responsibility principles

Understanding and applying knowledge - Our students will demonstrate understanding and apply knowledge in the field of economics while critically evaluating theories and concepts.

Problem solving - Our students will apply methods and decision-making tools in order to interpret and solve problems and create solutions in the field of economics.

Teamwork and communication - Our students will argumentatively communicate by providing arguments in written and verbal form on relevant economic issues while demonstrating teamwork.

Ethical perspective - Our students will be able to address economic development issues by applying ethical and social responsibility perspective.