

Research Results Presentation Guidelines

Under Article 34 of the Regulations on the University Postgraduate Doctoral Program, the doctoral candidate must present the research results on the Faculty's form, available online, in a recommended length of one to three author's sheets (16 to 48 pages). The research results must include all quantitative and qualitative research outputs, from the collection method (in the case of a survey conducted, all survey questions must be listed) and the statistical description of the database (with detailed comments on the results) to the results of the evaluation of the statistical and econometric models (with detailed comments on the results). Finally, the presentation should also include a comparison of the results with the results from the most relevant papers from the narrower research area of the dissertation.

In the same form, and before the research results presentation, the doctoral candidate should address any written comments and recommendations and provide answers to any questions from the defense of the doctoral dissertation topic. This text should indicate whether and how the comments and recommendations were taken into account, as well as the reasons for any non-acceptance. In addition, the doctoral candidate should indicate the structure/content of the doctoral dissertation by chapters and sub-chapters (regardless of whether it is a monograph or a Scandinavian-type dissertation).
